

OUR FRIEND AND POET TOM MOORE

You brought such harmony to heart and head
Two civilizations met as equal,
You set the tone for years when living and dead
Gave to your haunting need for peace a sequel;

The fragile moments of a nation's history
Were caught by you to furnish us with song,
You faced the spirit wound of so much mystery
To heal ourselves of the centuries' wrong,

Yet found a twin soul, a friend and brother
One like you, outcast upon fate
And learned to love each country like no other
Made of Irish and English an unlikely mate:

We celebrate the rich gems of your ore
Set in this culture, honouring Byron and Moore

(c) Rosemarie Rowley, 2011

www.rosemarierowley.ie

Rosemarie Rowley was born in Dublin and educated at Trinity College Dublin.

Rosemarie has published 5 books of poetry, and four times won the Epic Award of the Scottish Open International Poetry Competition.

She is President of the Irish Byron Society, with Chair Allan Gregory, and committee members Letitia Pollard, Frank Brady, Geraldine Semple and Anne Figgis.